ABSTRACT

This document represents an extensively revised and updated United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) Directory for Environmental Training Worldwide. It presents a listing of environmental education and training (EE&T) opportunities around the world as well as information on financial assistance for environmental studies abroad. This version has more than 430 courses and programs offered by 112 universities and other training institutions in 33 countries in five regions. The list contains information from all regions beginning with Africa and Asia/Pacific, followed by Europe, Latin America, North America, and Global. Countries, with university and course information, appear in alphabetical order within each region. The second section contains general information on how to seek financial assistance for studies and a list of possible sources of fellowships. (ASK)

Introduction

It was in September 1996 when UNEP published the last edition of ET Worldwide – A periodic compendium of opportunities in environmental education and training. Financial constraints then caused a set back in circulation, distribution and periodicity of this publication. However, encouraged by the continuous demand for ET Worldwide, particularly from those who have not yet an opportunity to access the internet, we are proudly presenting herewith the 15th edition of this EE&T Directory. We would be happy for your sharing this resource with your friends, colleagues and peers, so that the information becomes available to more than one person per copy. The list can be also opened and printed through the worldwide web within UNEP's homepage under: http://www.unep.org/unep/products/publicat/education/index.htm

This 15th issue has been extensively revised and up-dated. It is listing more than 430 courses and programmes offered by 112 universities and other training institutions of 33 countries in five regions. You will also find some guidance on financial assistance for environmental studies abroad, and – as a new rubric - "EE&T News, Links and Events". Most of the text is in English, but there are also some institutions announcing their courses in French or Spanish.

Please note that courses mentioned in this list are generally NOT UNEP sponsored or organised courses, and you should contact the organisers directly for further information. UNEP is also not in a position to award any sponsorship or scholarship to prospective participants in the announced training activities.

Course descriptions are structured in a very brief format. If you find a course of interest to you, please contact the implementing institution directly to seek further information on programmes, application procedures and costs. Kindly note that UNEP does not take any responsibility for the reliability of the information provided in this list. All information is based on latest facts forwarded to UNEP by the implementing universities or institutions.

This is also not a comprehensive list of available courses around the world. Environmental study offers are increasing in number every year, and UNEP does not have the possibility to monitor these developments regularly. If you have comments, corrections or additions to make to this directory, we would be grateful for such assistance. Please send an Email to the editor of ET Worldwide with all information you would like to add to the list.

Part II: FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Kindly find below information on possible sources of financial aid for those candidates wishing to pursue environmental studies abroad.

General: The acquisition of fellowships is often a lengthy process. It is therefore most important that applicants approach donor agencies, preferably several at the same time, at a very early stage. Fellowships are sometimes allocated to governments, who then nominate candidates. The standard procedure for this is for an applicant to request his/her employer to nominate him/her to the pertinent government office which finally nominates the candidate to a fellowship donor. If applying directly for external funding, you should instead contact the relevant office or representative of a funding agency or the diplomatic mission of a country providing financial assistance. In all cases, the application should be supported by letters of endorsement from appropriate authorities and letters of acceptance from the university or training institution.

European Committee: Countries signatory to the Lomé Convention receive fellowships for their citizens from the European Community (EC) Development Fund (EDF). In countries that have relations with the EC, the EC representative can provide information on how to apply for EDF fellowships through the local government agency appointed to promote and nominate candidates. With rare exceptions, EC fellowships are granted only to nationals of ACP (African, Caribbean and Pacific) countries.

Netherlands Fellowship Programme: A limited number of fellowships is available within the Netherlands Fellowship Programme for studies in the Netherlands. These fellowships are made available by the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs through the Netherlands Fellowship Programme. Priority is given to certain countries, to women and to university lecturers. Application forms are available from the Netherlands Government representatives in your country. Employers should ask the government office concerned to request the application forms on behalf of the candidates. Other Dutch scholarship funds include those awarded by the Netherlands Ministry of Education and Science. For further information about the latter, see the brochure 'Basic data', published by the Netherlands Universities Foundation for International Cooperation (NUFFIC), P.O. Box 29777, 2502 LT The Hague. This brochure is also sent to the Dutch embassies and consulates.

Other: Other countries might also offer individual fellowships for studies in the country concerned, similar to the Dutch Fellowship programme above. For more details, please contact each country's Embassy or Diplomatic Mission in your country.

The British Council offers a limited number of fellowship and their offices are found in the capital city of most countries. Their Main Office in London is: British Council, 10 Spring Gardens, London SW1A, U.K.

The Commonwealth Secretariat offers a very limited number of fellowships to citizens of Commonwealth countries. Applications should be sent to CAB International, Wallingford, OX10 8DE, U.K.

The World Bank launched a Graduate Scholarship Programme. Information on this programme can be obtained from its administrator (World Bank, 1818 H Street, NW, Washington DC 20433, USA). It is one of the few agencies which processes individual applications.

Also UNDP can assist in finding scholarships. UNDP offices are found in all developing countries.

Below are suggestions for possible sources of financial assistance for studies, training and research abroad. The first part of the list contains a few publications and listings with further information on where to find funding, while in the latter part you will find suggestions on further organizations which might offer scholarships.

NETTLAP – The network for environmental training at tertiary-level in Asia and the Pacific

NETTLAP consists of institutions and individuals active in environmental education and training at tertiary (e.g. university, technical institute, teacher training college) level in the Asia-Pacific region. NETTLAP was developed to:

- enhance the environmental expertise of decision makers, policy formulators and tertiary level educators;
- increase the environmental skills and awareness of tertiary level students;
- enhance environmental technologies and capacities for their use; and
- strengthen the overall environmental expertise in the region at technical, management and policy levels.

NETTLAP develops and applies innovative methods in environmental training; identifies regional training needs and shares knowledge through ongoing interaction amongst network partners. For more information: NETTLAP, UNEP / ROAP, UN Building, Rajadamnern Avenue, Bangkok 10200, Thailand; Tel: +(66-2) 288 1801; Fax:+ (66-2) 280 3829; Email: nettlap.unescap@un.org; Web-site: http://www.unep.org/unep/regoffs/roap/nettlap/index.html

ACRE schools

The Australian Cooperative Research Centre for Renewable Energy (ACRE), in collaboration with Murdoch University, is very active in the field of environmental education and training. They have developed a quite efficient hands-on web-site for schools and the general public on training in the field of renewable energy. For more information: Australian CRC for Renewable Energy Ltd., Murdoch University, South Street, Perth 6150 Australia; Tel: +(61-8) 9360-6620; Fax: +(61-8) 9360-6624;

Teaching/learning CD-ROMs

Inter-active CD-ROMs are increasingly popular for teaching and learning processes since they can be used during class-room training events as well as for informal education, and on an individual basis. Here are some of the latest editions:

Finding the Balance (Ecology & Environmental Issues on a Global Scale) offers an in-depth educational look at environmental issues facing our planet. Divided into three parts (How the Earth Works, The Seychelles Environment, and Dealing with the Issues, e.g. water and waste management, endangered pants and animals,) this CD-ROM proves to be an effective learning aid encouraging environmental sensitive action of the user. For more information: Pebble Beach Interactive, 1102 8th Ave., 3rd Floor, Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada S4R 1C9; Tel: +(1-306) 777-0710; Fax: +(1-306) 586-3537.

Two more educational CD-ROMs of the LIOR CD-ROM COLLECTION are ready, providing practical solutions for intelligent management of energy and the environment. Co-sponsored by the European Commission (EC), the CDs deal with "Heat/power for domestic and industrial use"; and with "Biogas from waste and wastewater treatment" respectively. For more information: LIOR, Panoramalaan 7, B-1560 Hoeilaart, Belgium; Tel: +(32-2) 657-5300; Fax: +(32-2) 657 3640; Email: info@lior.be; Web-site: http://www.lior.be

Pollution prevention training material straight from the web

The U.S. National Pollution Prevention Center for Higher Education (NPPC) publishes on their internet homepage online-viewable and online-printable versions of a variety of pollution prevention curricula, training materials and other resources. These include existing materials in business, science, and engineering as well as new offerings. To view any of these publications, all you need is an internet access and the free Adobe Acrobat Reader programme - if you don't already have it, just click on the link on NPPC's page.
